and Champion of American Taste

Not for Sale in Book or News Stores

THE ALDINE while issued with all the regular ity has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals It is an ele gant miscellany of pure light and graceful literature and a collection of pictures the rarest speci mens of artistic skill in black and white Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends the real value and beauty of THE AL-DINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year While other publications may claim superior cheapness as com pared with rivals of a similar class THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and un approached—absolutely without competition in price or character The possessor of a complete vol ume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes *for ten times its cost and then there are

PREMIUM FOR 1874

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE by Thomas Moran whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars The subjects were chosen to rep resent 'The East' and 'The West' One is a view in the White Mountains New Hampshire the other gives The Cliffs of Green River Wyoming Territory
The difference in the nature of the scenes them selves is a pleasing contrast and affords a good dis play of the artist's scope and coloring The chro mos are each worked from thirty distinct plates and are in size (12x16) and in appearance exact fac similes of the originals The presentation of a worthy example of America's greatest landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was a bold but peculiarly happy idea and its successful realization is attested by the following testimonial

These chromos are in every sense American They are by an original American process with material of American manufacture, from designs of Ameri can scenery by an American painter and presented to subscribers to the first successful American Art Journal If no better because of all this they will certainly possess an interest no foreign production can inspire and neither are they any the worse if by reason of peculiar facilities of production they cost the publishers only a trifle while equal in every re spect to other chromos that are sold singly for double the subscription price of THE ALDINE Persons ... will prize these pictures for themselves—not

HOW TO DRESS A TURKEY —Mr N W
Hardy of New Hampshire calls our attention to his way of dressing a turkey Take a board four feet long, one and a half feet wide bore an inch hole in the centre, about eight inches from one end, saw out a strip from this end, to the hole, about one inch wide or wide enough to admit the neck of the turkey Place this board on a barrel, with one end against your hips Lay the turkey on this board, on its back with its neck in the slot and head underneath, then, with a sharp knife cut its throat under the board (that the blood may be out of the way) take the turkey by the legs, draw steadily, to keep its neck in place, raise it from the board, that it need not be bruised, and commence at once to pull out the tail and wing feathers, and by the time it is done kicking you will have near ly all the feathers off You will find that they will come off nearly as easy as if scald ed The pin-feathers, if any, should be taken out at once When dressed, carry to the house, lay the carcass upon the table on the back, with wings in position, and wipe dry —

COMMUNISM.

The proceedings at a mass-meeting of workingmen in Cooper Institute, New York, last Friday evening, afforded a striking illustration of the dangerous tendencies of the false doctrines which demagogues have put forth to tickle the ears of the laboring classes, and of the arbitrary assumption by trades-unions of the right to control both capital and labor. It is only a short time since we noted the demand of the Coopers' Union of New York, that barrels manufactured in this State should not be purchased by their employers, and the history of almost every strike tells of society-men going from place to place intimidating and interfering with those who desired to work rather than to remain idle. It is not long since a large proportion of the various craftsmen of New York were engaged in a lock-out and within two years there have been repeated attempts to inaugurate a general strike for increased wages by workingmen throughout the country. While business of all kinds was brisk, employers were frequently compelled to submit to the demands of the strikers; but the recent panic, by depressing all branches of industry, has turned the tables, and now the persons who were not satisfied with the highest rates of wages paid in any part of the world, are demanding support at the expense of the more provident classes.

At the mass-meeting in Cooper Institute, a report was presented showing that of eleven of those trades unions whose members recently struck work rather than allow the slightest reduction of wages during the depression of business, there are now 20,250 men idle and less than six thousand at work. This is a startling statement. Still, it must be remembered that this meeting was not composed of the most poorly paid class of Irish laborers, but of English, French and German workmen, who have been for years receiving most liberal wages, so that they should be prepared for a temporary reverse. If the number of the unemployed is startling, the methods by which they would obtain relief are even more so. They demanded the immediate employment of all idle workmen, by the city, the immediate erection of the repudiated Industrial Palace by resident workmen; the division of a public ground into cheap homesteads, and the reduction of all salaries to $5,000. One of their mottoes was "Give us work, or the remission of three months' rent," and an Address to the people of the United States was adopted, demanding that all men and women unemployed be clothed and fed and sheltered at the Government expense, without inquiring into their character or deserts, and that no one person be allowed to accumulate property worth more than $300,000. Resolutions were also adopted, of which the following are the most important points:

"That we will, in this our time of need, support ourselves and our families with proper shelter and the necessaries of life and will send all our bills for the same to the city treasury, to be liquidated, until such time as we shall obtain work, and pay for all our work.

"That we demand work, and pay for our work, now, without delay, and the instant and entire abrogation of the whole Government contract system.

"That we steadily and persistently demand that eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work, in all private as well as public contracts.

"That, in order to prevent money panics in the future, we will demand the immediate enactment of a law that shall limit the accumulation of any individual.

"That we will at this time appoint a Committee of Safety from this assembly, whose duty it will be to look after and protect the interests of all the people, and, if need be, enforce them.

"That this Committee of Safety shall call a meeting of all the industries of this city, whenever it is deemed expedient, to give force and expression to their action.

"That we recognize in the Farmers' Grange movement throughout the country our most efficient co-workers in the limitation principle."

A telegram from Cincinnati reports a meeting of about four thousand English and German workmen in that city, Saturday night, at which similar doctrines were advocated and incendiary speeches made. These outcroppings of the spirit of communism are undoubtedly due to the influence of reckless agitators, who care nothing for the people whose passions they inflame. The most industrious of these intriguers are foreigners who think it safer to ply their vocation in this country than in Europe, and the people who are led by them do not stop to consider that such demonstrations must check the sympathy which their misfortunes would otherwise command. In the United States there is no tyranny of privileged classes over the rights of the workingmen, but on the contrary the latter have been for years past the most arbitrary and exacting portion of the community. To demand that workmen shall fix their own wages in times of prosperity and that the public shall support them whenever they are idle, is too absurd; and the honest laboring classes will do well to repudiate the demagogues who would commit them to doctrines so false to their own interests and so dangerous to society.

Despatches from Washington state that Congress is not disposed to increase taxation unless it shall prove actually unavoidable. There can be no doubt that the reduction of taxes at previous sessions was made injudiciously sweeping, under the influence of opposition clamor, but having been reduced there is a strong desire to avoid increasing them now. Action has already been taken by the House committees toward securing a reduction of the estimates, and it is to be hoped that the Executive Departments may vigorously apply the knife wherever an unnecessary or extravagant item can be lopped off, to the end that the revenues may be sufficient to meet our expenditures.

A REPORT DOUBTED. A despatch from Speaker Blaine to the Kennebec Journal says that there must be some mistake in regard to the reported death of Mr. Charles H. True. The papers assign Nov. 23th as the date of his death, and Mr. Blaine has received a letter from him dated Vermillion, Dakota, Dec. 1st. This will be gratifying intelligence to his friends, who have been in great suspense for several days.

The Washington Star says that on Monday last, Sunset Cox was more than usually active, spurty, and irrepressible in the House. Finally, when the House came to an agreement to proceed with the debate on the salary bill in twenty-minute speeches, Cox despatched a page with the following note:

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Put me down for twenty minutes. S. S. C.

To which the Speaker replied;

DEAR COX: I would be delighted if I could keep you down half that time. J. G. B.

The Treasurer of the United States has received from ex-Mayor Pierce of Boston, the check paid him by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives for salary from the death of his predecessor, Mr. Whiting, to the commencement of the session on the first of December. Although this payment was strictly in accordance with law, Mayor Pierce declined to retain the money on the ground that he drew during the time a salary as Mayor of Boston. Mr. Pierce has also presented the whole of his salary as Mayor, to the Boston Public Library.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR AGASSIZ.

The death of Professor Agassiz is not only a serious loss to this country and the scientific world, but throughout the United States, where he had so endeared himself to all, it will be regarded as a popular bereavement. The fatal result of his illness was not unexpected, although the hope for his recovery was reluctantly surrendered. The immediate cause of his sickness was a severe cold, but the fatal progress of disease was probably due to the exhaustion of his mental and physical powers by over-work. The generous and disinterested character of his devotion to science is well known, and it has been justly remarked of his researches that, unlike many learned men, he did not reason himself into infidelity; but "believed that all knowledge was good and came from the source of good, and traced everything 'from nature up to nature's God.'" He not only welcomed knowledge from every source, but sought it and toiled for it as others do for gold and fame, and it was his chief delight to spread the knowledge he acquired broadcast among his fellow-men. In laboring for the enlightenment and benefit of humanity he has earned a title to the respect and esteem of the world which no riches could buy. We are able to give but a mere outline of the distinguished career so suddenly brought to its close:

Louis John Randolph Agassiz was born in 1807 near Lake Neufchatel, Switzerland, and was, therefore, in his sixty-seventh year at his death. Though Swiss by birth he was descended from a family of French Huguenots who went into exile. Early manifesting a taste for scientific research, he studied at the College of Lausanne, at the Zurich Medical School, and at the Universities of Heidelberg and Munich, besides attending for four years Schelling's lectures on philosophy. At first he intended to adopt the medical profession, but at Munich he became intimate with such distinguished scientists as Oken, Martius, Schelling and Dollinger, and soon achieved prominence in scientific study. Being selected by Martius to assist in completing the great work on Brazil, the great ability which he displayed won for him a position among the leading scientists of the age, and his future progress was uninterrupted. His next important work was the publication of the Natural History of the Fresh Water Fishes of Europe, and he subsequently devoted ten years of travel and study to the fossil indications of past ages, the results of which he published in 1844. In 1832 he had been appointed Professor of Natural History at Neufchatel, and in the fourteen years prior to his arrival in this country he spent most of the time in travel.

In 1846 he arrived in Boston on a scientific mission for the Prussian Government, and the following year resigned his position and accepted the chair of Zoology and Geology in the Lawrence Scientific School at Harvard College. He has since been closely identified with this College, and has established there a museum which, in many of its departments, is the most valuable and complete in the world. In 1865 he visited Brazil, spending eighteen months in exploring the valley of the Amazon, which was made the subject of a volume printed in 1867. In 1871 he accepted the invitation of Prof. Pierce, of the U. S. Coast Survey, and joined an expedition on the steamer Hassler, which visited the West Indies, Brazil and Patagonia, thence through the Straits of Magellan to Juan Fernandez, Chili, the Gallapagos Islands, Panama and so to San Francisco. The collections made on this journey were magnificent, and after his return, Prof. Agassiz was able to speak with the utmost pride of his museum as being "actually in advance of all existing institutions in zoological research."

Professor Agassiz received many testimonials to his scientific greatness, and the esteem in which his efforts were held, from various scientific bodies and educational institutions. In 1861 he received the Copley medal from the Royal Society of London. From the Academy of Sciences, Paris, he received the Monthyon Prize for Experimental Philosophy, and the Cuvier Prize; the Wollaston medal from the Geological Society, London, and the medal of merit from the King of Prussia. He was a member of the leading scientific bodies of Europe and America, LL. D. of the Universities of Dublin and Edinburgh, and LL. D. of Harvard (1845).

In the early part of his career in this country, Professor Agassiz married a daughter of the late Thomas G. Cary, a granddaughter of the late Thos. Handyside Perkins, of Boston, who has shared in all his labors and travels, keeping a daily record of discoveries and events. Of his children a son inherits the tastes of his father, and has been associated with him in his professional labors of late. The life of Prof. Agassiz was undoubtedly sacrificed to over-exertion; but he lived long enough to do a grand work and to enjoy a foretaste of his lasting fame among those whom he had chosen to be his country men.

DEATH OF A PROMINENT FREE MASON. Chas. W. Moore, one of the most prominent Free Masons in the United States, and indeed one of the most prominent in the world, died at his residence in Boston, Mass. on Friday evening last at the advanced age of 72 years. He was made a Mason in 1822 since which time he has taken an active part in the labors of the various subordinate bodies to which he belonged, as well as in the Grand bodies of Massachusetts and the General Grand bodies of the United States, having filled the highest offices in several of them. He was also especially prominent in the Supreme Council of the A. and A. Rite, 33d, Northern Jurisdiction, and his influence was strongly felt in the settlement of the difficulties which formerly encompassed that body. He was at the time of his death, and had been for many years, the editor of the Freemason's Monthly Magazine, the leading Masonic journal in the United States, and has made through its columns many valuable contributions to the Masonic literature of the country. He was a man of sterling integrity, faithful to all trusts, and during the dark days of anti-Masonry continued the steadfast friend of the institution, never for a moment wavering or faltering. He leaves a very large circle of Masonic friends throughout the country to mourn his loss. His funeral will take place at 12 o'clock to-day.

The island of Sainte Marguerite, which is to be the future residence of Bazaine, is one of the Isles Lerins, a group in the Mediterranean, off the town of Cannes. It has an historical interest from having been the place of imprisonment of the "Man with the Iron mask."

A GRACEFUL GIFT. The Young Women's Association, of Boston, are holding a fair at Music Hall, in aid of the Home established for the relief of the needy among the large numbers of young workingwomen in that city; and although the sales have reached about $3,000 daily, the tables are constantly replenished with new donations. One of the most graceful of the gifts to the fair, is a complete edition of Whittier's poetical works presented to the flower table by the author, and bearing on the fly-leaf this inscription:—

Not for the doubtful rhyme within Nor outside gold,
Stranger or friend, I warn thee well,
Should this be sold;
But freely, for the sake of such
As homeless be Give thrice its worth, and it shall prove Cheap unto thee.

REPUDIATION

They claim that the President of that meeting, "Banks," was not a member of the Internationalists, and the latter society was not represented there.

PROCTOR AT THE LOTUS CLUB

Professor R A. Proctor, the English astronomer, was received at the Lotus Club on Saturday evening by the members and a distinguished company of invited guests. In acknowledging the compliment to himself Mr Proctor called attention to several instances of [illegible] opposition by the Astronomer Royal and other English scientific men to the recognition of the discoveries and observations of American scientists. The Astronomer Royal had opposed the reward of a gold medal to Miss Mitchell on the ground that, although she had undoubtedly discovered the comet she had neglected to send the news of the discovery by the first mail. In conclusion the Professor predicted a wonderful future for America.

FROM BOSTON.

DEATH OF PROF LOUIS AGASSIZ

BOSTON, Dec 15 The last hours of Prof. Agassiz were apparently passed in unconsciousness. At 3 P M Sunday he had an attack similar to the one before, a suspension of respiration which continued half a minute, accompanied by other indications of approaching dissolution. These were succeeded by unnaturally rapid breathing that continued to grow fainter with departing vigor. The patient lay upon his side, and beyond an occasional convulsive movement of the limbs there were no signs that he suffered pain, and the finale was scarcely perceptible

Flags in Cambridge are at half staff The funeral will be in the College Chapel at 2 30 P M on Thursday and will be public.

OBITUARY NOTICES

All the Boston morning papers publish biographical and obituary notices of Prof Agassiz. The serious character of his illness had fully prepared the public for its sad termination and the news of his death therefore was not a matter of surprise.

BOSTON BOARD OF TRADE.

An adjourned meeting of the Boston Board of Trade was held this afternoon, the subject specially assigned for discussion was the currency—its relation to the present crisis B F. Nourse, chairman of delegates to the National Board of Trade, presented a lengthy report in relation to the currency and resolutions to co-operate with the National Board against the issue of any more irredeemable paper money and recommending to Congress measures to improve the currency and prepare the way for return to specie payments, which were adopted.

THE HEAVY RAINS.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 15. It has been ascertained that the recent heavy rains have not prevailed extensively south and east of the Ohio river, and a great rise is consequently not expected. The small streams are reported high at all points in Indiana and Ohio, with damage to crops, and in a few cases to bridges; but not making great destruction.

THE VIRGINIUS CASE!

Reports from Key West!

ALL QUIET IN HAVANA!

Tone of the Cuban Press!

A VESSEL SENT FOR THE VIRGINIUS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 A Key Wey West special, dated Dec. 14, says: The Despatch sails to-night with four officers from the flag-ship Worcester on board, and an extra crew of 39 men from the Pawnee to receive the Virginius, and probably to take her to a northern port. The Despatch will carry a full complement of officers selected from the squadron to take charge of the Virginius.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR DELIVERY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15. The truth of the Havana despatch published this morning in relation to the Virginius and the surviving passengers and crew is in the main confirmed to day in official quarters. The Canandaigua, Juniata and Kansas were at last accounts at Santiago de Cuba and it is understood that these vessels will receive the passengers and crew while the Virginius will be delivered elsewhere—perhaps at Bahia Honda Although nothing reliable on this point can now be obtained from official sources, to-morrow, as heretofore stated, is the time for the consummation of the agreement

THE NEW DESPATCH BOAT.

The Despatch, formerly the yacht America, and purchased by the Secretary of the Navy last November, is regarded by the Department as the most valuable of her class in the service, owing to her swift sailing qualities. She has done good and constant service since the commencement of the Virginius complications

TRANQUIL

HAVANA, Dec 15 The city is perfectly quiet Details from the Volunteer battalions patrolled the streets last night. There is no late news in regard to the Virginius

DISCUSSING THE ABOLITION OF SLAVERY.

A number of prominent and wealthy slave owners met yesterday to discuss the question of abolition. The meeting adjourned without definite action.

THE PRESS ON THE RIOTS.

The Diario strongly condemns the riotous demonstration of Friday night and wants to know who instigated the movement All those who took part in it really aided the rebellion. The Captain-General should proceed with vigor against the disturbers of peace and if necessary declare martial law throughout the Island.

The Vosa de Cuba reports that several rioters were arrested and recommends that those proved guilty be treated with the utmost severity It attributes the trouble to the machinations of the Laborantes and declares that the Government should put a stop to their intrigues

WASHINGTON

THE QUESTION OF INCREASED TAXATION

New York Dec 15 A Washington despatch says the Ways and Means Committee have called upon Secretary Richardson for a statement of his reasons in writing for asking an increase of taxation, and for a specific proposition which he presented. The Secretary states that many of his reasons are found in his annual report, and the condition of the Treasury has not improved since the report was made. About eighteen million dollars of the legal tender reserve has been issued. The reason why taxes should be levied on the articles suggested by the Secretary is that collection would be easy and the return immediate. The Secretary has made his representations to Congress at this early day in the hope that immediate action may be taken to prevent a further excess of expenditures over receipts The increase of the public debt this month will be about twelve million dollars.

THE SENTIMENT OF CONGRESS

seems generally to favor the restoration of the duties on tea and coffee, and possibly, if the bill which will be offered for that purpose could be voted on without delay, it would be passed during the present week. As it is there is some uncertainty whether the opposition to the measure will be strong enough to force delay. With respect to an increase of tax on whiskey there is more diversity of opinion When the bill comes up there will be a proposition to raise the tax to one dollar per gallon.

THE FEELING ABOUT WHISKEY.

It is thought by many that under the internal revenue machinery, now established, one dollar per gallon can be as easily collected as seventy cents, and if no more frauds were successfully carried out with that tax than succeed under the present law the increase of the revenue would be very great. There will also be a great deal of opposition to any increase whatever on the ground that the tax is now as high as can be successfully collected, and also because of the feeling that prevails against affording an opportunity for speculation with the stock now on hand.

THE SECRETARY'S VIEWS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15. Secretary Richardson, in a letter to Representative Dawes, reiterates his previously expressed views that it is better to obtain the necessary money by taxation than by increase of the national debt by a loan. He says he selected tea and coffee because the public would feel the tariff on these articles less than on any others, and as to the articles of taxation pertaining to the Internal Revenue Bureau the money covered can be collected without additional expense to the Government. The Secretary, today, ascertained that the public debt has increased since the 1st instant, five million dollars

REQUEST THAT THE ESTIMATES BE CUT DOWN

Both the Ways and Means, and Appropriation Committees in the House, in view of the Secretary of the Treasury's letter, took action today, by agreeing to report a resolution to the House requesting the President to cause a revision of the estimates to be made by the heads of the various Executive Departments, in order that the apparent necessity for additional taxation be obviated

John L. Pennington will be the successor of J A Burbank, who has resigned the Governorship of Dakota.

THE TREASURY BALANCES.

The balances in the Treasury to-day are:

Special deposit of legal tenders for the redemption of certificates of deposit,	28,575,000

THE VILLE DU HAVRE

STATEMENT OF A PASSENGER

TROY, N.Y, Dec 15 A letter from Legrand C. Cramer of this city, a passenger on the ill-fated Ville du Havre, gives a thrilling description of the collision by which that vessel was lost. He says that there was lamentable on the steamer; that it was manifest during the heavy storm which prevailed prior to the disaster and that the passengers felt apprehension on that account. He (Cramer) went down with the ship and coming up again secured support and floated until picked up He was badly hurt and was twice pulled under by drowning persons.

LACK OF DISCIPLINE

DESERTED BY THE OFFICERS.

He says the officers and crew of the steamer abandoned the passengers to their fate, going off in the life boats and leaving them to look out for themselves. When he first came on deck the officers told him the ship had struck a small vessel and was uninjured.

A CONTRARY STATEMENT—THE OFFICERS COMMENDED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15. Letters from C. Burritt Waite, one of the survivors of the Ville du Havre disaster, do not confirm the charges against the officers of that steamer. Mr. Waite declares that the surviving officers did everything in their power, but the time between the collision and the sinking of the steamer was too short to admit of effective measures for saving life. He states that Capt. Surmont sank with the ship and was subsequently picked from the sea in which he was swimming.

MASSACHUSETTS.

THE WESTFIELD MURDER.

LOWELL, Dec. 15. Hildreth, who killed Doland at the Westfield poor farm, is alive, and so much improved as to be able to give an account of the circumstances. He and Doland were in a dispute, and he took a chair and hit Doland over the head as he lay in bed. Doland did not move, and he went down stairs, took a razor and returned to the room, and inflicted the cuts which nearly severed his victim's neck. It was when he saw Doland so badly cut that he attempted to take his own life. In this he evidently lacked nerve. The coroner's inquest will be held to-morrow. Hildreth was placed under keepers.

KILLED AND WOUNDED.

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 15. Michael A Grady was killed, Michael Flaherty severely wounded and several others slightly hurt by a falling rock at the Hoosac Tunnel Monday morning.

SUICIDE.

Geo Kent, of Pittsfield, committed suicide by discharging a pistol in his mouth Monday morning. Ill health was the cause.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT. It was about two o'clock Friday morning that Mrs. Hennessy of Nelson street, thinking she heard a noise in the kitchen crept out of bed and into that room to see if it was not Hennessey who had been expected in for several hours. On reaching the kitchen she found her lord and master sitting on the floor with his new silk hat in between his knees, and in the hat several dried herrings and about two quarts of water. Mr. Hennessey was eyeing the mixture with profound gratification. "John Hennessy," screamed the lady, "what are you doing?" "Me?" inquired Mr. Hennessy, with a look of surprise. "Why, Matildy, I'm (hic!) starting an (hic!) aquarium for you Christmas."

Mark H. Dunnell vs. Nathaniel A. Howes. Appellant. Judgment for defendant.

[illegible]

IMPORTANT RAILROAD DECISION. In the case of Patrick Harlan vs. the Eastern Railroad company, an action for damages for personal injuries received at Newport on the Maine Central line, while en route for New Brunswick from Boston, where he had purchased a through ticket at the Eastern depot, a rescript has been sent down, which is as follows:—

"The defendants were not carriers of persons beyond its own line. Its contract with connecting roads did not make the defendants responsible for damages occurring on the other roads. The sale of a through ticket did not impart a contract by the defendants for the safety of the plaintiff while travelling on the connecting lines."

At the trial in Boston the Court ruled that as the accident occurred on the Maine Central the defendants could not be held for the negligence of that road's servants. A pro forma verdict for the defendant was rendered and the plaintiff took exceptions, which now have been overruled as above stated.

BANGOR LIBRARY ASSOCIATION A meeting of the members of the Bangor Library Association was held at their rooms in Kenduskeag block, last evening, for the purpose of discussing the question of consolidation with the Mechanic Association The discussion was participated in by several of the gentlemen present, who favored a union under certain conditions It was stated during the discussion that the debt of the Association is now $3,000 and that there are at present no resources to meet this liability. By discontinuing the reading room it was thought that the running expenses can be reduced $500, this with various other economies was discussed, and then the question of consolidation was taken up, the committee in whose charge the matter has been, reporting the proposition received from the Mechanic Association as impossible to be accepted, inasmuch as the condition requiring them to raise $18,000 cannot now be complied with. After some further remarks on the subject the following motion made by Dr Coe was carried —

Voted, That the Bangor Library Association hereby authorize the Board of Direction to transfer the books and other property belonging to the Association to the Bangor Mechanic Association, on condition that the Mechanic Association shall agree to assume the liabilities of the Bangor Library Association, and to allow all citizens of Bangor the use of the books and privileges of membership on equal terms

After the passage of this resolution the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the President

BUSINESS REVIVAL. The Economist, referring to the evidences of revival of trade from the depression of the panic, says:

It has long been remarked that when the dry goods trade is good every branch of business is prosperous, and this holds good at the present time more than ever. It is surely a hopeful sign of the future that this great industry, which was the last to feel the effects of the panic, is the first to recover from it. There is not a commercial or industrial interest in any part of the country which will not speedily experience the beneficial effects of a restoration of the great woolen and cotton manufactures. It is the first and best sign of returning prosperity to the whole American people.

The Pittsburgh (Pa.) Commercial of the 8th, noting the revival of business in various quarters, adds:

Our own iron works in various directions are also giving notice of a resumption of business on a substantial demand in the market for iron, so that there is reasonable assurance that in that, our staple manufacture, the worst is over. Everywhere the business outlook is of a more cheering character than it has been for two months past.

The N. Y. Times mentions that the steamer Ohio, from Philadelphia to Liverpool, on her last trip took out 1,200 car wheels. This, of course, is as yet a comparatively isolated case, but it has some significance. American car wheels are acknowledged by some English makers to be of superior character, their excellence being attributed to the peculiar method of manufacture, involving the use of charcoal iron. The shipment reported on the Ohio is, however, a very large one relative to the export of this article, which was 2,317 wheels in 1871, 4,780 in 1872, and 6,615 in 1873. The Katahdin iron is said to be very desirable in the manufacture of car-wheels.

For several years I have continued to prescribe it, in many cases with very beneficial results Since, upon solicitation, you kindly afforded me a more intimate knowledge of the composition of your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, I have used it freely in my practice both in diseases of the Chest, as Consumption and Bronchitis, etc, and in infantile diseases of the prima via, or Stomach and Bowels, with eminent success, considering it super or to any similar preparation yet offered to the public. ever invented. This simple little machine which is no less than winds the thread on a bobbin without the use of a person's hands, as even as thread is wound on a spool by the manufacturers. This as every lady knows is a very important thing in order to get an even tension, and it is very hard to do without these machines, which not only save one fourth of time but wind one-third more thread on a bobbin The Attachment is confined to the machine in the same place as the oil one and the price is within the reach of all Can be seen in operation at

FISHING.

BY GEORGE A. BAKER, JR.

Harry, where have you been all the morning?"
"Down in the pool in the meadow-brook."
"Fishing?" "Yes, but the trout were wary—Couldn't induce them to take a hook."
"Why look at your coat! You must have fallen Your back is all covered with leaves and moss."
How he laughs good-natured fellow!
But luck in fishing makes most men cross.

Nelly [illegible] Wrights have called—where were you?"
"Under the trees by the meadow brook, [illegible] you know, and it was too lovely,
I never saw such a charming book."
The charming book has pleased her greatly,
There's a happy look in her sweet blue eyes,
And she hugs it [illegible] in most fervid fashion,
To [illegible] old Tabby's intense surprise.

[illegible] well yes but not from a novel,
[illegible] truly but not with a rod.
The [illegible] the book neglected
The water grasses whisper and nod
The sportsman bold and the earnest student Talk softly of—what? Perhaps the weather [illegible] whatever the subject,
It [illegible] brings them close together.

[illegible] words to be softly spoken,
With many a lingering pause between,
[illegible] while the shadows chase the sunbeams
Over the mosses gray and green.
[illegible] are needful to its discussion,
And softly glances from downcast eyes,
[illegible] depths are lying hidden
Loving glances and sweet surprise.

[illegible] Church is gay this evening
Bright with beauty and flowers and light [illegible] at the chancel
With Nelly beside him all in white, [illegible] the vows are spoken
And smiling friends, good fortune wishing Tell him [illegible] prize
[illegible] morning's fishing

ELISE

A secluded village was that of Leahold, and nested in one of our most secluded country districts, a primitive village, such [illegible] railroads and telegraph stations [illegible] from the face of the [illegible].

Strolling out of Leahold amid the clusters of [illegible] into the country along a shady road you came upon Leahold Hall, a commodious [illegible] dwelling place, most secluded [illegible] nestled amid its towering trees and shrubs, as if it did not want to be [illegible] the world. If it had been a thorn in the sides of the village residents for fifteen years, this isolated dwelling, inasmuch as that, with all their curiosity, they could [illegible] to know anything of the family in habiting it. A gentleman had come one day to Leahold, went over the place with the agent, and purchased it. His name was Radnor. Later, he took possession with his sister, Mrs Courtney, a silent, haughty dame, [illegible] his daughter, then a toddling [illegible], and some respectable old servants, who seemed as reserved and silent as their master and mistress. More than that [illegible] could not get to know. They heard of the improvements and decorations made [illegible] which workmen from a distance came to execute, they saw the fine [illegible] brought, the parcels of books delivered once a month at least, they watched the close carriage drive out with its inmates [illegible] was all. They seemed to have no friends, two or three people who [illegible] to call upon them were received courteously, but their visit was not returned. Twice every year the gentleman rode away on horseback to the country town, a long distance. There he left his horse at the livery stables, took the train, and went [illegible] somewhere. At a month's [illegible] would come back again, pay for the [illegible] mount him and set off on [illegible]. Naturally all this was exas[perating] to a lively public curiosity; but at the end of fifteen years the public had become none the wiser.

The child, Elise was the joy and care of the household. The servants adored her, her [illegible] her widowed, childless aunt trained [illegible] her. An accomplished scholar [illegible] speaking French and German and other languages as a native, Mr Radnor [illegible] his child as good a scholar as [illegible]. Mrs Courtney, a thorough musician [illegible] the little fingers over the ivory [illegible] sweet young voice its [illegible] while old Karl, the only indoor [illegible] servant, a German, had the little lady in the saddle as soon as she could sit erect. All [illegible] growing up as carefully trained [illegible] accomplished a young lady as the world [illegible]. But that same world was to her a [illegible] place, of whose kingdoms and re[illegible] she read in history—whose loves and [illegible] were subjects for the poet's pen [illegible] she never thought to know aught save [illegible] hearsay—whose temptations, trials [illegible] pleasures and pains [illegible] words on her ears. Far [illegible] than many a child of [illegible] was Elise [illegible] in her early womanhood.

It was her eighteenth birthday. She sat [illegible] room called her own, reading from a book that had been her morning present, a beautifully bound Goethe. It was her [illegible] her aunt's was a dressing case [illegible] silver. Elise was far better looking than she had herself any idea of. Her [illegible] slender and graceful, her face [illegible] and [illegible] gentleness and in [illegible] of rare sweetness, her eyes [illegible] the soft brown hair shading [illegible]. A child's face yet, but promises to be [illegible] perfect in its maturity.

She was [illegible] sitting, poring rapidly over [illegible] German characters that she loved [illegible] when a summons came for her [illegible] library and she went at once.

They were waiting to receive her, her father and [illegible], that gentleman and lady now [illegible] years, tall and stately both, and [illegible] each other—not in the least [illegible] of the blonde type, their snowy [illegible] eyes and gentle faces, carrying the [illegible] of their buried sorrows, were strikingly unlike the brilliant girl, whose youth [illegible] their memory haunted age—[illegible] solemn in their aspect struck E[lise] and her [illegible] buoyant step was stayed. She [illegible] kind of dread that some [illegible] was going to be entered on—an ex[illegible] that the [illegible] every vein within her [illegible] her father and aunt, they [illegible] that it was judged by them time now [illegible] was eighteen, to speak to her of her mother of whom she had ever heard. Elise had supposed her dead.

It was a sad story. Mr Radnor was nearly [illegible] aged man [illegible] had wed [illegible] a lovely [illegible] Elise. He [illegible] business as a merchant and [illegible], having a business [illegible] India. The young wife did not love [illegible] she had loved a cousin who was poor, and the marriage was forced upon her by her parents. [illegible] of that Mr. Radnor had known nothing. The death of his partner in India [illegible] Mr Radnor to undertake a voyage [illegible] after the birth of Elise. The ship was wrecked and all souls were supposed to have perished.

As it was somewhat the same story that has since been given to the world by the poet Tennyson in the poem "Enoch Arden." Mr. Radnor and a few more of the passengers escaped on a raft to an uninhabited island — [illegible] elapsed before they were landed in [illegible], to which country the rescuing ship was bound, and before Mr Radnor could communicate with home. Some subtle instinct [illegible] of dread lay upon him, and he returned home without the delay of a day, neglecting his business in India neglecting all. When he returned home and stood before his wife, he found she had been the wife of her cousin. The shock was greater than she could bear. It acted upon a mind never well balanced, an attack of brain fever came on, and it left her hopelessly insane.

Mr Radnor gave up business and buried himself at Leahold. His visits twice a year had been to the asylum that contained his poor raving wife. The cousin was dead.

"My darling," he said to Elise, "I would have spared you all these details, but that you would inevitably learn them when you go out into the world, and you cannot be kept in this secluded spot forever. Circumstances have hurried the explanation. The poor blighted life is drawing to a close, and as your mother's strength fails her reason is returning. I have had a letter from the resident doctor this morning, he says that a few days must see the ending, and her one haunting desire, her sole cry is that she may see you, her child. We must go to her Elise."

"Yes, papa, we must go to her," was the [illegible] answer. But it came in a dull, dry [illegible] voice as if the strange story were pressing too heavily on the heart and brain. An other moment and the girl had burst into a storm of hysterical, irrepressible tears.

They started on their journey. No need to tell of the painful interview with the poor woman, then dying. Elise saw her own face reflected in the one, worn and wasted by disease, lying on its snowy pillow.

They waited for the funeral, taking up their abode in the neighboring hotel, and on the following day prepared to return to Leahold. No one knew what this had been to Elise, or how passionately she felt the early wrong, unconscious though it had been, dealt out to her father by his wife. The unthinking love of her childhood was increased a hundred fold. It was her mother who had crushed his noble heart, and she resolved that all the devotion of her life should be given to atone for it.

All being ready for their departure, they were in the hall of the hotel, waiting while the luggage was placed on the carriage that would convey them to the station, when, to the extreme surprise of Elise, she saw her father, for the first time in her recollection, greet a friend. A gentleman had entered, and two names were called out upon impulse

"Godfrey Huntingdon!"

"Thomas Radnor!"

Elise looked up to see a face as old as her father's lighted by the warm sun of a glad recognition.

"Dear old fellow, how are you?" came like a boy's tones the affectionate greeting. "We are fated to meet on the wing, Radnor. I have just returned home, and, lo! I meet you. Last time it was in Paris—how many years ago?—after your compulsory trip to China. How is Mrs Radnor and the wonderful baby?"

"I have recently lost my wife," was the quiet answer, "but," and a sweet smile hovered round the father's lips, "the wonderful baby is here. Elise, this is my dear old friend, Col Huntingdon, my only child, Godfrey."

Elise raised her crape veil, to meet the kind look of eyes blue as her own father's, and full of loving interest.

"Where are you bound now?" was the next query of the old soldier.

"Home to Leahold. My place in the country. You will come with us, Godfrey. It is very quiet and dull, but Caroline is there, and we will try and make it pleasant to you. Poor Caroline has been a widow as——" As long as I have, he was about to say but cut short the words.

"I should like it of all things! but Leon is with me."

"Leon?"

"My brother's only son. You remember what Charley was, Radnor? Well, this boy's the same. A genius like his father, dreamy, impulsive, full of talent and fire, and with as much common sense as would rattle in a mustard seed. I have had to take to him, he'd do no good in the world without me—Sings a little, paints a little, writes well in a certain style, and will some day inherit my modest income. He is with me here."

"And welcome with us of course," said Mr Radnor. He shall have no complaint to make of his welcome."

The carriage is ready, Sir, interposed the waiter. "There's not too much time to get to the station."

"Never mind, we'll take the next train," replied Mr Radnor, [illegible] that that one sentence he sealed his own death warrant.

They went back to their sitting room, and Leon Huntingdon joined them. The two old men were soon deep in the discussion of by gone memories, leaving the young people to look at each other.

Leon Huntingdon was one of those remarkably good-looking men rarely seen. A tall and gentlemanly figure, with a classically beautiful face and attractive manner left nothing to be desired outwardly. But he was [illegible] man, no, indeed possessing active vices, but very fond of his own gratification and his self importance. With talents of a high order he had suffered them to be dormant and was drifting down life's current, a useless member of society. Col Huntingdon saw no fault in him, and Leon depended upon inheriting his uncle's small fortune, and left the future to take care of itself. He was about five and twenty now and might already have made a name in the world had he chosen to do it. But he had amused himself instead, living an idle life, traveling over Europe and to the East. Just now he had come back from an expedition to the Nile. With a poet's love of the beautiful, he lacked the poet's stimulus to write, with an artist's eyes, he wanted the artist's perseverance, with the soul of a musician he was content to simmer ever the practice of the [illegible] art. And this man was studying Elise with a lazy appreciation of her beauty, pale and sad as the young face now looked. Mr Leon Huntingdon was not quite heart whole. The silvery laugh of a gay coquette, a pretty fascinating girl, who had made one of the party on the Nile expedition, yet rang in his ear, a blonde face with merry blue eye and floating curls of palest gold, even now flitted between him and Elise, and his memory [illegible] honeyed words of his and pressure of eyes melting under his gaze during past weeks [illegible] now gone by. The girl's name was Lewis. But there was a present pleasure in the sight of the delicate beautiful face before him, and he was not a man to let a pleasant present. So, gradually the distance between him and Elise narrowed and soon he was leaning over her chair, his arm resting on the mantle piece, and she was listening, spell bound, to his vivid description of the Nile. He talked well with the poet's power weaving his thoughts into words, the artist's eye to select the beauties of description, and the experience of a man of the world to avoid tedious lengthiness. An egotist and Sybarite in feeling, he yet possessed the art of keeping the personal pronoun in the background of personal narrative.

To Elise the three hours before the carriage came round again was one dream of delight. Even the break made by lunch only was rendered pleasant by his attentions at table and by her father's brightened face.

It was afternoon when the train started, and the first few hours of the journey were passed in delightful converse. The party had the carriage to themselves, and how pure! with what Elise had during the past week gone through, this was indeed a change—Years later, had you asked Elise of that day, she would have said that it seemed like Paradise, and that she had been suddenly hurled from it into some dreadful Dantes, from peaceful whispers, into demon's cries. With Leon's voice yet in her ears, she was stunned by a crushing noise—by [illegible] groans, and the lifting of heavy weights, from Leon's face her eyes were turned to the horrible, indescribable confusion of a railway collision.—She escaped [illegible] the Colonel and his nephew, but the [illegible]

Porters carried him to the nearest hotel, and for nearly a month he lingered on there, and then death supervened.

That month! who can describe those days of suspense and agony? Mrs Courtney came at once to her brother, the Huntingdons never left the place. Every care that love, friendship and anxiety could devise, was spent upon the life passing away, but Elise trusted no watching but her own. Until utterly wearied out she never left her father's side, and when obliged to rest, it was only for a few hours at a time. From childhood's unclouded happiness, her transition to a woman's misery had been abrupt and cruel—Just wakened to the knowledge of her debt to her father, he was dying, with the craving of her heart [illegible] Could longing worship, [illegible] love, the yearning [illegible] have saved him. He had not died, but, with every pain soothed by his daughter's touch, every want met by her care, her hand on his brow, her kiss on his lips, Thomas Radnor drifted away from life describing the heart he had made [illegible] that life's study to fill and beautify.

Gone! By the empty bed the orphan lingered, touching with icy fingers the pillow where his head had rested. In her heart, rent with its woe, lay the cry that goes up from so many bereaved ones to the Supreme Power, Give me back my dead!"

Stunned, passive, and physically worn out with watching, Elise was taken back to Leahold. Not six weeks ago she had seen the sun rise on her eighteenth birthday with entire happiness within and around her. She came back orphaned, with a knowledge of pain and sorrow in her heart and in the past, whose dark curtain seemed to have been raised in vain.

In a will made after his accident, Mr. Radnor left Col Huntingdon his daughter's guardian, and both himself and Leon accompanied Mrs Courtney and the orphan back to Leahold.

Col Huntingdon had believed his friend to be a man of wealth, but he was utterly unprepared for the vast income of which he now became trustee. Accumulating by compound interest the handsome fortune of fifteen years before had gathered and increased till Elise was heiress to wealth that dazzled her guardian. She, poor girl, in her bereavement took little note of it.

In like manner, if a Dane, naturalized in the United States shall renew his residence in Denmark without the intent to return to the former country, he shall be held to have renounced his naturalization in the United States.

TREATY

Agreement between the United States and Spain for the Settlement of certain Claims of Citizens of the United States, made by Daniel E. Sickles, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States at Madrid, and His Excellency Senor Don Cristino Martos, Minister of State of Spain. Concluded February 12, 1871.

Memorandum of an arbitration for the settlement of the claims of citizens of the United States or their heirs, against the government of Spain for wrongs and injuries committed against their persons and property, or against the persons and property of persons of whom the said claimants are the legal representatives by the authorities of Spain, in the island of Cuba or within the maritime jurisdiction thereof, since the commencement of the present insurrection.

1. It is agreed that all such claims shall be submitted to arbitrators, one to be appointed by the Secretary of State of the United States another by the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Spain at Washington, and these two to name an umpire who shall decide all questions upon which they shall be unable to agree, and in case the place of either arbitrator or of the umpire shall become vacant by cause, such vacancy shall be filled forthwith in the manner herein provided for the original appointment.

2. The arbitrators and umpire so named shall meet at Washington within one month from the date of their appointment and shall before proceeding to business, make and subscribe a solemn declaration that they will impartially hear and determine to the best of their judgment, and according to public law and the treaties in force between the two countries and these present stipulations, all such claims as shall, in conformity with this agreement be laid before them on the part of the government of the United States, and such declaration shall be entered upon the record of their proceedings.

3. Each government may name an advocate to appear before the arbitrators or the umpire to represent the interests of parties respectively.

4. The arbitrators shall have full power, subject to these stipulations, and it shall be their duty, before proceeding with the hearing and decision of any case, to make and publish convenient rules prescribing the time and manner of the presentation of claims and of the proof thereof, and any disagreement with reference to the said rules of proceeding shall be decided by the umpire. It is understood that a reasonable period shall be allowed for the presentation of the proofs, that all claims, and all testimony in favor of them shall be presented only through the government of the United States, that the award made in each case shall be in writing, and if indemnity be given, the sum to be paid shall be expressed in the gold coin of the United States.

5. The arbitrators shall have jurisdiction of all claims presented to them by the government of the United States for injuries done to citizens of the United States by the authorities of Spain, in Cuba since the first day of October, 1868. Adjudications of the tribunals in Cuba concerning citizens of the United States, made in the absence of the parties interested, or in violation of international law or of the guarantees and forms provided for in the treaty of October 27, 1795, between the United States and Spain, may be reviewed by the arbitrators, who shall make such award in any such case as they shall deem just. No judgment of a Spanish tribunal, disallowing the affirmation of a party that he is a citizen of the United States, shall prevent the arbitrators from hearing a reclamation presented in behalf of said party by the United States Government, nevertheless, in any case heard by the arbitrators, the Spanish Government may traverse the allegation of American citizenship, and thereupon competent and sufficient proof thereof will be required. The commission having recognized the quality of American citizens in the claimants, they will acquire the rights accorded to them by the present stipulations as such citizens. And it is further agreed that the arbitrators shall not have jurisdiction of any reclamation made in behalf of a native born Spanish subject, naturalized in the United States, if it shall appear that the same subject-matter having been adjudicated by a competent tribunal in Cuba, and the claimant, having appeared therein, either in person or by his duly appointed attorney and being required by the laws of Spain to make a declaration of his nationality, failed to declare that he was a citizen of the United States, in such case, and for the purpose of this arbitration, it shall be deemed and taken that the claimant, by his own default, had renounced his allegiance to the United States. And it is further agreed that the arbitrators shall not have jurisdiction of any demands growing out of contracts.

6. The expenses of the arbitration will be defrayed by a percentage to be added to the amount awarded. The compensation of the arbitrators and umpire shall not exceed three thousand dollars each, the same allowance shall be made to each of the two advocates representing respectively the two governments, and the arbitrators may employ a secretary at a compensation not exceeding five dollars a day for every day actually and necessarily given to the business of the arbitration.

[illegible] governments [illegible] the awards made in the several cases submitted to the said arbitration as final and conclusive, and will give full effect to the same in good faith and as soon as possible.

Postal cards not so prepaid will not be forwarded in the mails between the two countries.

ARTICLE 2.

The regulations and instructions governing the use and treatment of postal cards in the domestic mails of the United States and of Canada, respectively, shall apply equally to the postal cards mailed in either country and addressed to the other country.

ARTICLE 3.

Each country will retain to its own use the postage it collects, at the prescribed rate on postal cards forwarded to the other country.
